

Dear eLibrary User

Welcome to the new AIS eLibrary which is now operating in Beta mode, i.e. being tested by users. We hope you find it a great improvement on the previous version and recognize it as an important benefit of AIS membership. As information systems people we should not have been surprised that our move to the new eLibrary has revealed a number of problems and issues in the old data, but we were! We hope these have now been corrected but we still need your help in making the eLibrary as error free as possible so please check (including your own papers) and report any problems to: elibrary@aisnet.org.

This is just the beginning for the new eLibrary and is a very exciting development for AIS. We will shortly have significantly increased content and hopefully this will be on an ongoing basis as the benefits are recognized by users and content providers alike. Our aim is for the eLibrary to become the 'one stop shop' for all IS academics and professionals for their journal and conference paper needs.

We welcome any comments that you have to: elibrary@aisnet.org. Potential content providers wishing to have their material available for wide dissemination on the eLibrary please also contact me and discover the many benefits.

Guy Fitzgerald, Vice President of Publications
Guy.Fitzgerald@brunel.ac.uk