French Papers Department of CAIS

Jean-Fabrice Lebraty, Department Editor

The French Papers department of CAIS is open to high-quality research written in French or centered on French specificities. These articles have to be focused on Information Systems (IS) phenomena with an emphasis on managerial aspects. Many areas of IS may be addressed, as long as original and recent issues or solutions are described. The department also welcomes contributions in newly investigated fields that will be appealing for the reader (new startups, companies that have not been studied yet, NGO's etc.). Submissions must clearly describe and justify a research question. Each article has to display both a theoretical and managerial perspective and must be easily readable.

Suggested topics include:

- New concepts in Information systems
- Usage of new devices (IoT etc.)
- Implementation projects in uncommon places or countries
- IS competence models
- Teams – virtual and traditional
- Cyberwarfare and other timely and critical issues
- Links between turbulent context and IS
- Complexity management and IS
- Organizational structures and IS
- Business Models and IS
- Failures and collapses with IS
- Competitive intelligence
- Decision making in Extreme environment and IS
- Decision support systems
- Challenges of Social Network Applications
- Information and Influence Management

Submission Instructions

Authors interested in submitting a paper are asked to first contact the department editor at jean-fabrice.lebraty@univ-lyon3.fr with a proposal. After receiving feedback, authors should submit complete manuscript via the CAIS ScholarOne site (http://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/cais).

Submissions should be accompanied by a cover letter. Authors must submit to the "Papers in French" department, which accepts both standard submission types (editorial board review and peer reviewed). Submissions are welcome in English or French. Traditionally, submissions will be assigned to the department editor (Jean-Fabrice Lebraty), however, authors can request other members of the editorial board if they provide a justification.